IN OUR CURRICULUM

PSYCHOLOGY

HUMAN DIGNITY

Psychology emphasises respect and dignity for every individual, whether in research or mental health treatment. Awareness of biases like cultural and gender biases in research is crucial. This teaching underscores valuing each person uniquely and promoting loving respect toward all individuals and creatures.

Psychological research ethics prioritise participant protection from harm, crucial in sensitive areas like race and homosexuality studies. Sensitivity is essential in psychopathology topics such as OCD, depression, and schizophrenia. Cultural and gender biases in research, seen in studies like Ainsworth's and Milgram's, highlight the need for awareness and inclusivity.
